He did the day's work that was given him:
He toiled for men until he flamed with God.
Now in his greatness, ever superbly lone,
He moves in his serene eternity,
Like far Polaris wheeling on the North.

GEORGE WASHINGTON, the Nation-Builder

Washington, the Nation-Builder

By Edwin Markham

A Spartan mother called him into Time,
And kindled duty in him as a flame;
While he was schooled by the primeval hills
Of old Virginia—schooled by her mighty woods,
Where Indians war-whooped and the wild beast prowled.
His name was written on no college scroll;
But he drank wisdom from the wilderness.
The mountains poured into his soul their strength,
The rocks their fortitude, the stars their calm.

He grew a silent man;
Yet carried on all roads
The lofty courtesies, the high reserves.
He seemed to know, even in this noise of time,
The solemn quiets of Eternity.
But fiery energy, a live crater, slept
Under that mountain calm; yet never blazed
Into a passion, save in some black hour
When craven souls betrayed the people. Then
He was all sword and flame, a god in arms.

With the heart of a child, the wisdom of a sage,
He toiled with no self to serve.
He grew in greatness, year by luminous year
Until he carried empire in his brain.
Yet if no Cause, no high commanding Cause,
Had called him to the hazard of the deed,
None would have guessed his power
To build a nation out of chaos, give
To her the wings of soaring destinies.
But at the Hour, the People knew their Man,
The one ordained of Heaven, ordained to stand
In the deadly breach and hold the gate for God.

And when the Scroll was signed and the glad Bell
Of Independence echoed round the world,
He led his tattered host on stubborn fields,
Barefoot and hungry, thru the ice and mire—
Thru dolours, valors, desperations, dreams—
Thru Valley Forge on to world-startling hours
When proud Cornwallis yielded up his sword.
And all the way, down to the road's last bend,
Cool Judgment whispered to his listening mind.
Where there was faltering, he was there as faith;
Where there was weakness, he was there as strength;
Where there was discord, he was there as peace.

His trust was in the Ruler of Events—
In Him who watches. He could say, "The ends
Are in God's hands. I trust,
But while I trust I battle." In this creed,
His soul took refuge and his heart found rest.
When, after Yorktown, all the guns were husht,
Still was our Chieftain on a battle line,
Fighting old laws, old manners, old beliefs.
He fought the outworn old,
And lit new torches for the march ahead.

Life tried his soul by all the tests of time—
By hardship, treachery, ingratitude;
Yes, even by victory and the loud applause.
When fortune flung to him a crown, he flung
The bauble back and followed the People's dream.
He turned from all the tempters,
Stood firm above the perils of success—
Stood like Monadnock high above the clouds.

Washington's Rules of Civility

Every action in company ought to be with some sign of respect to those present.

Be no flatterer, neither play with anyone that delights not to be played with.

Read no letters, books or papers in company; but when there is a necessity for doing it, you may ask leave. Come not near books or writings so as to read them unless desired nor give your opinion of them unasked; also, look not nigh when another is writing a letter.

Sleep not when others speak; sit not when others stand; speak not when you should hold your peace.

Show not yourself glad at the misfortune of another, though he were your enemy.

Undertake not what you cannot perform, but be careful to keep your promise.

Let your discourse with men of business be short and comprehensive.

Undertake not to teach your equal in the art he himself professes; it savors of arrogancy.

Mock not nor jest at anything of importance; make no jests that are sharpbiting, and if you deliver anything witty and pleasant, abstain from laughing thereat yourself.

Wherein you reprove another be unblamable yourself; for example is far more prevalent than precepts.

Use no reproachful language against anyone, neither curse nor revile.

Be not hasty to believe flying reports to the disparagement of any.

Associate yourself with men of good quality if you esteem your own reputation; for it is better to be alone than in bad company.

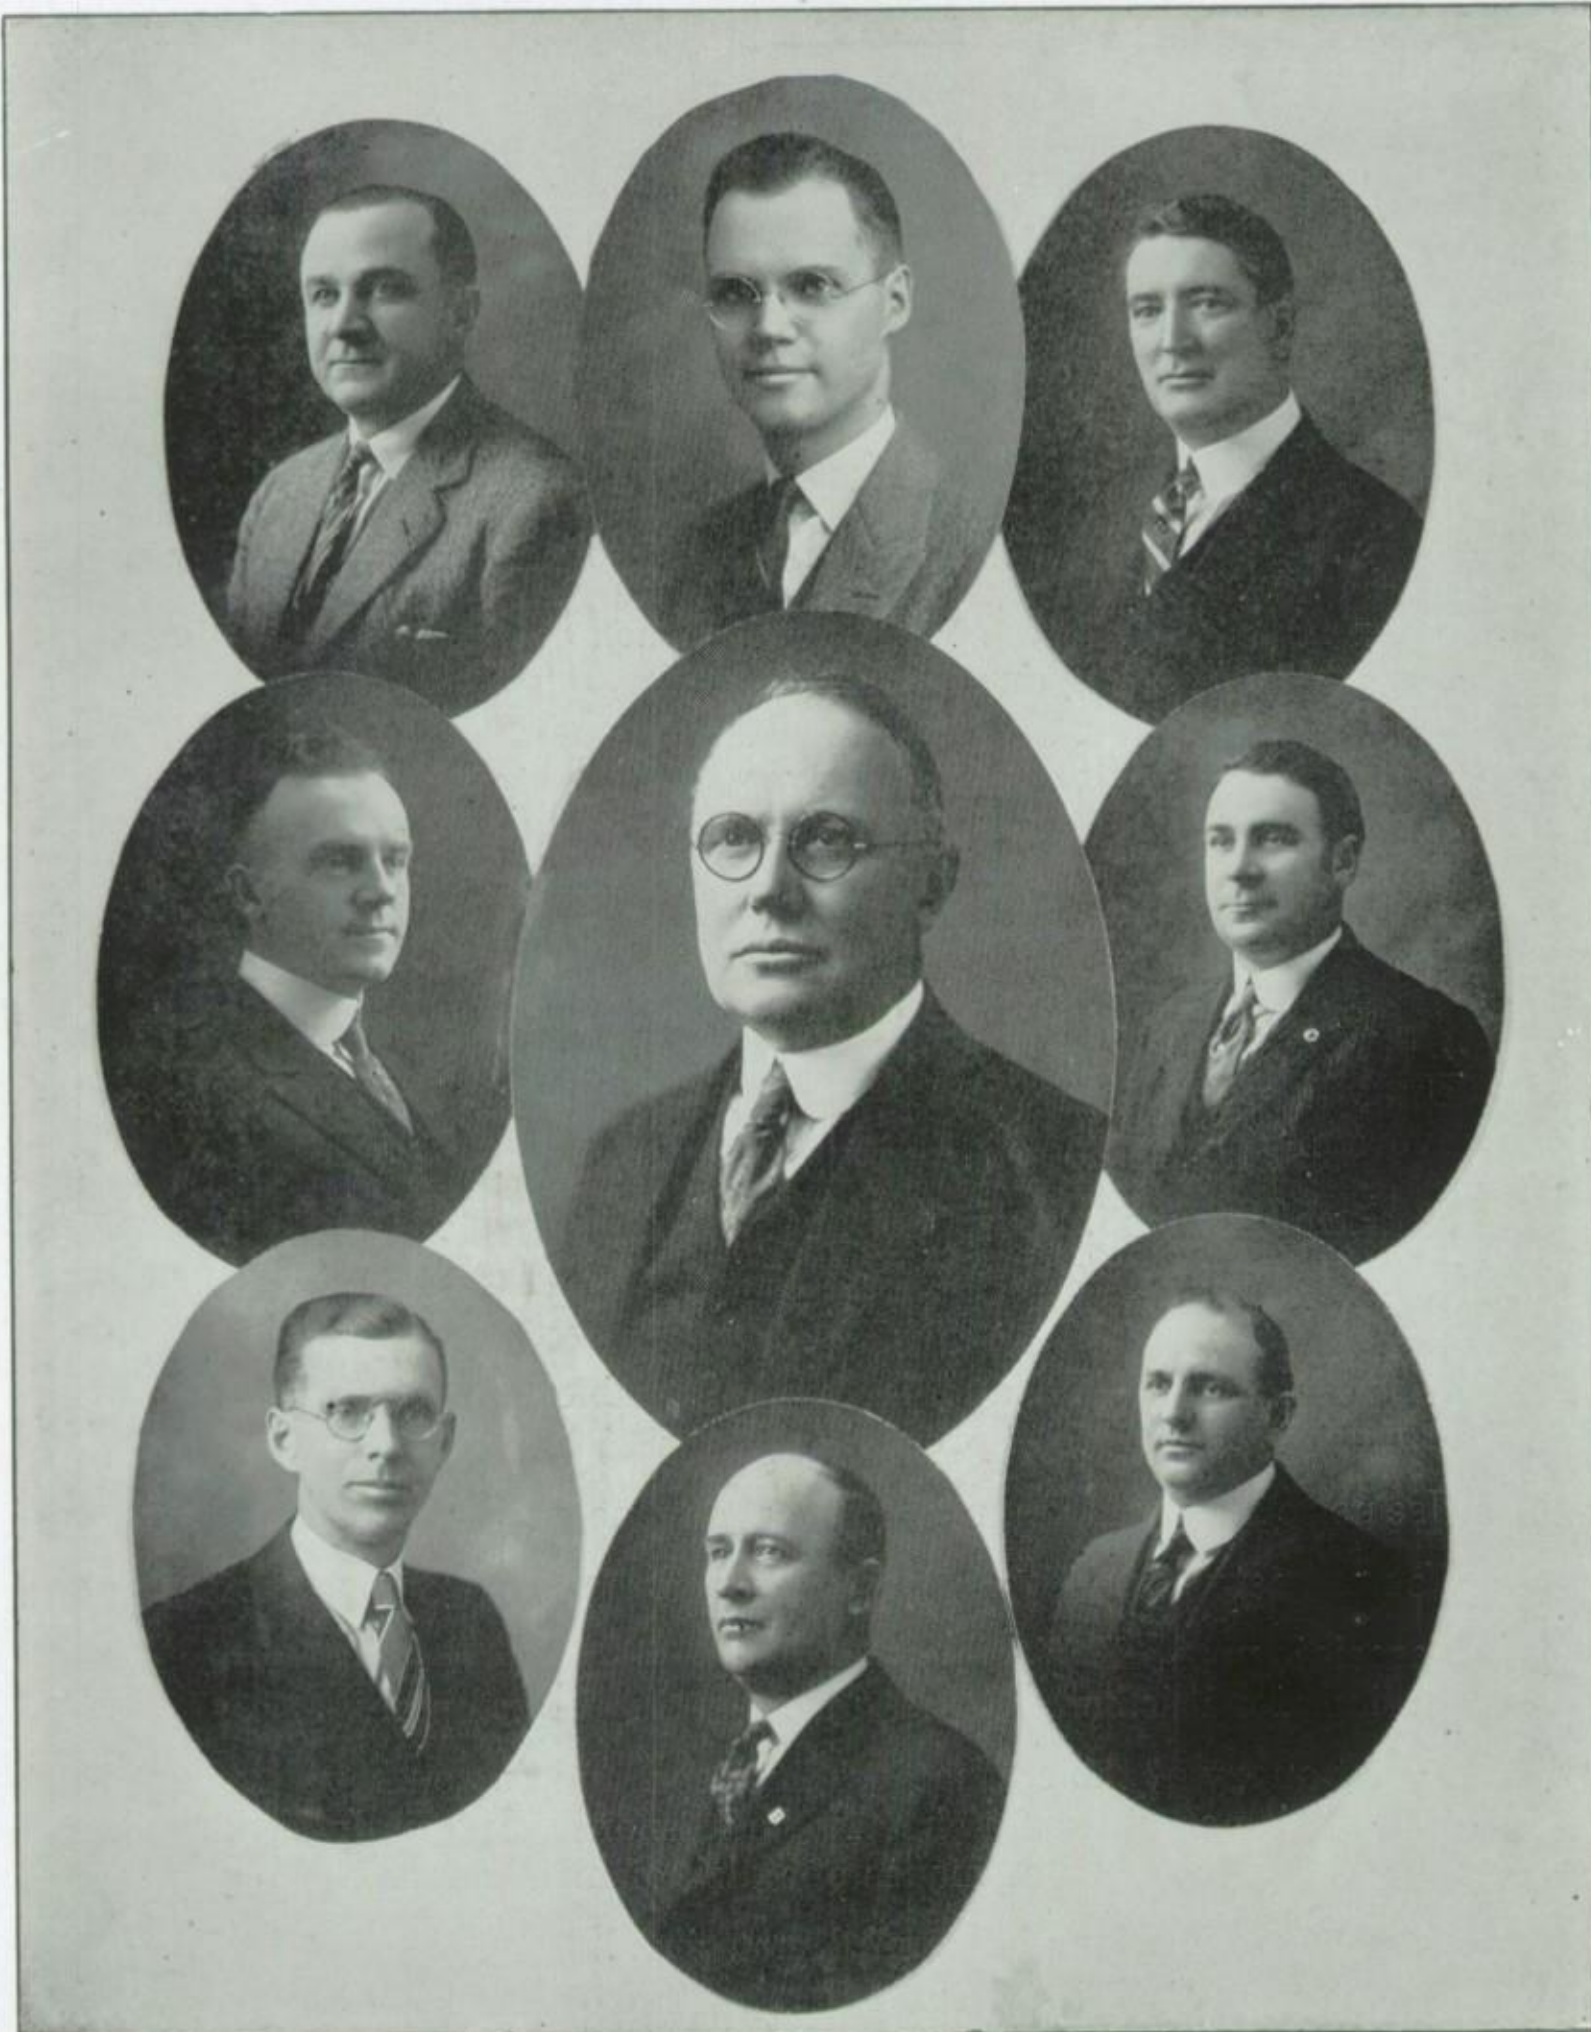

Be not angry at table, whatever happens, and, if you have reason to be so, show it not; put on a cheerful countenance, especially if there be strangers, for good humor makes one dish of meat a feast.

Let your recreations be manful, not sinful.

Labor to keep alive in your breast that little spark of celestial fire called conscience.

A Changing World

TWO hundred years. That sounds like a long time, doesn't it? In the history of a country, however, it isn't so long. Think of the hundreds, yes, thousands of changes in this old world since 1732, the year of George Washington's birth! I dare say that if he should come back to life to celebrate his anniversary, he would be as much bewildered as Rip Van Winkle to find horseless carriages, great, black, monstrous steam engines pulling long trains, and then those enormous birds that have such a horrible roar for a song, that one can hardly hear anything but it.

If he survived the shock, perhaps Washington would like to visit the Capital and meet the present President and First Lady. While talking with them he would hear strains of music coming from a cabinet. When he commented upon it, he would learn that the music was coming from an orchestra in New York City. Imagine his surprise. New York City! Impossible! Then, at dusk, instead of lighting candles, one of the servants would simply press a button and immediately the room would be flooded with light. Wonder of wonders! What next? All these things and more would the poor, bewildered man see should he return to spend his anniversary with us.

I think, however, that it would not take the great and versatile "Father of our Country" so very long to understand the progress through which the country has passed.

Moreover, he would be extremely surprised to learn, how, in spite of this metamorphosis, the people through the generations have clung steadfastly to the memory of his own traits and accomplishments. If he could view the homes and schools, he would see the mothers and teachers trying to impress his own maxims and characteristics upon the minds of the rising generation. I imagine he would have a pleasant little chuckle over many of the little stories told which, however, illustrate beliefs which were truly his.

His standards of honesty, truthfulness and a complete lack of fear are those which all of us should acquire. Then, too, his refusal to accept defeat should teach us also to strive on to our goals in the face of obstacles. One thing which we should not forget is the ability to be a good follower, which trait, together with all his other characteristics, made him the noblest of leaders.

As the Romans described Brutus, so the Americans can describe Washington: "He was the noblest American of them all!"

Speaking of Birthdays . . .

1932—What an eventful year of birthdays! This year marks the two hundredth anniversary of the birth of our First Citizen, George Washington, the one hundredth anniversary of the establishment of the village of Medina, and last but not least, the twentieth anniversary of our own "Mirror."

In regard to this last mentioned, I believe that I can safely say that there are comparatively few people who really know a great deal about its origin. The very first number was published in the spring of 1912. It was a small, paper-covered book, quite unlike the "Mirrors" we have known. The cover design consisted of a drawing of a hand mirror with the reflection of the old high school building, or, as it was popularly known, the old "Academy," in it. There were no photographs in this first "Mirror" as there have been in its successors, but this feature gradually became a necessary part of the book.

Its editors-in-chief have included several of the well-known, prominent young men and women of this community, many of whom will be recognized from the following chronological list, to date:

1912	Harold Ryan	1923	Julia Fay
1913	Charles Danolds	1924	Raymond Gilbert
1914	Robert Munson	1925	Helen Gillmeister

Washington—Statesman and Soldier

Washington Bicentennial Prize Essay

IN all history there is no greater character than George Washington. The world has known great soldiers; the world has known great statesmen, but no one has ever equaled the noble achievements of our illustrious chieftain. He led in peace the country he had freed in war.

George Washington served his military apprenticeship against the craftiest of foes, the American Indians. From the age of nineteen, this tall, slender Virginian fought as an English officer against the savages and their equally shrewd allies, the French. In the dark forests of the frontier, the importance of watchfulness and preparedness were deeply impressed upon his mind for, in the surprise attack, the Indians excelled. As time went on, Washington seemed to absorb some of the fox-like cunning of his foes and he developed into a crafty leader—sensing the strength and position of his opponents and placing his men to the best advantage. He was the leading soldier in the colonies, and when the Continental Congress made its portentous decision, Washington was naturally chosen Commander in Chief of the Colonial forces.

At the head of his “ragged regimentals” Washington became the truly great soldier. All the qualities of the military heroes of history were his. We see him turning farm boys and old Indian fighters into an army which loved and respected him. We see him the superb tactician at the Crossing of the Delaware; the stern disciplinarian in the bitter words with which he quelled Lee; the kindly comrade during the sad days of Valley Forge and the merciful conqueror after the surrender at Yorktown. In the words of John Warwick Daniel, “At the head of raw volunteers, hungry to the edge of famine; ragged almost to nakedness, whose muniments of war were a burlesque of its necessities, he defeated the trained bands and veteran generals of Europe.”

With victory won, and peace assured Washington felt that his public career was at an end and he retired to Mt. Vernon. During the next few years he lent the prudence of his counsel to the cause of union. Recognizing his integrity, his wisdom and his patriotism, the grateful country unanimously elected him to be the first president of the United States. To many his greatness as a statesman is harder to realize than his military ability, but, in fact, we find him admirably fitted for his new role, in which he was destined to achieve magnificent success. For at an early age Washington had learned a self-reliance and a self-control which are indispensable to a political leader and his early experiences as a surveyor, woodsman and soldier had given him a true sympathy with democracy. This sympathy, together with his own aristocratic traditions, enabled him to realize the extent to which the opposing ideals of democracy and aristocracy could be blended to form a strong foundation, the only stable foundation, for our government. Add to this a nature, straightforward and manly; a clear, flexible mind and we have a man superbly equipped for the high position he had been called to fill.

Washington was never a passive president. No fact in history is more clearly established than that he was, in truth, the Chief Executive of his own administrations. We see instances of this dominance in his firm resistance to the insolence of revolutionary France and his refusal to enter upon a second war with England. In reading the history of his terms we see his steady accentuation of the national principle and his noble efforts to reconcile his Cabinet as well as the humane policy towards the Indians and his prompt crushing of the Whiskey Rebellion. Nor were Washington's thoughts always on the present for he sensed the evils of slavery and foresaw the importance of the west. Washington Irving eulogizes the career of the greatest statesman by saying: "It seems as if Providence had endowed him in a pre-eminent degree with the qualities requisite to fit him for the high destiny he was called upon to fulfill—to inaugurate a new and untried government."

George Washington, Soldier, Statesman; "his fame is written upon the very forehead of time". For here was a great man—a man who by sheer strength of purpose led a young, divided and disorganized nation to victory and then, the choice of his countrymen he led in peace as in war, welded that nation into enduring strength and unity.

Class History

THE Class of 1932 began its checkered career under the able supervision of Miss King and Miss Hall. About the only activities of this first year were the usual Christmas party and the election of the officers for the room. The girls in 206 had also a Hallowe'en party which is still fondly remembered by the participants.

As there was not enough room upstairs for the newly-pledged Sophomores, we were ignominiously confined to the second floor during our second year. Of course, some of the luckier ones were allowed to go up to Miss DeLand's room at the beginning of the second half of the year, and some were sent to 300. These widely separated factions managed to hold their usual Christmas party, however.

Then came the "Junior Room," or Room 300, for all of us. Although sandwiched between the advanced Sophomores and the "almost Seniors," the Junior class managed to choose its rings and have its Christmas party. Somehow the choosing of class colors and the selection of the motto was overlooked.

Nevertheless, the class moved on to the Senior room where the class officers were elected, the motto was chosen, the colors were selected, and the usual argument was waged over the selection of Commencement invitations. The class has raised absolutely no money, but this is not so tragic as the fact that there was no trip to Washington this year. We have, however, helped in the sale of the tickets for the Dramatic Club play, "Her Step-Husband," and for the operetta, "Lelawala."

At the present, the class is timorously regarding the fast-approaching day of Commencement and the still faster-approaching Regents' week.

Prophecy of the Class of 1932

AN airplane sped through the air on a trip around the world with two old friends talking of their high school days. These friends had failed to notice the pilot and when he turned his face toward them they gasped with astonishment. It was the famed commercial pilot, Eddie Feller, whose name had traversed the globe. Below them there appeared a large city where many of their former high school classmates lived and worked. Looking downward they saw first a large factory owned by two life-long partners, Leland Monagle and Neil Ryan. Elsie Wright and Mary Parada worked here as head stenographers. Anthony Dombroski held the position of chief bookkeeper in this concern. Flying on they saw a large hospital in which was Carlton Waters, world famous surgeon. As nurses there were Gertrude Brust, Dorothy White and Lorraine Wienke.

Passing over the residential district they perceived many happy homes. Several of these were occupied by their old schoolmates leading happy married lives. Among these were the homes of Ruth Austin, Florence Boyle, Edna Collins and Eleanor Gotts. Continuing onward they passed a large school. Here as instructors were Florence Chamberlin, teacher of French; Margaret Bookey, teacher of English; and Glenn Bloomingdale, professor of sciences. Lilah Bolton was head of the commercial department.

Heading now over the countryside they passed many farms. In one field they noticed Clare Stillinger, a prosperous farmer. Nearby was another large farm owned by Stanley Hill. Farther on they saw a happy home inhabited by Marian Haak.

After several more hours of travel they passed over another city where Esther Shurgour and Dorothy Shannon conducted a beauty parlor. Nearby, working in a large department store, were Vivian Peacock and Edna Boyle. Soon the passengers of the plane saw the capital city of New York State where David White and Raymond Ingram were very prominent lawyers. Later, West Point came into sight. Here the passengers knew of the presence of Robert Ayrault and Smith Munson as high officers in the service of the United States Army. In the nearby vicinity Walter Schultz and Stanley Rook conducted a very successful electrical concern.

At last the travellers saw the skyscrapers of New York City and stopping here for a short time they hunted up an old friend who was a musical comedy star. She, none other than Mabel Ross, told them that Bernard Dujenski was playing a banjo in the orchestra at the theater where she was employed. Homer Bacon was manager of this theater. Calling at a broadcasting studio the friends found Verna Wheeler as a renowned singer. In the metropolis also were Margaret Hoyt and Ivy Shepard as very successful interior decorators.

The next morning the pilot was again ready to conduct the two friends on their trip around the world. Passing over the Atlantic they perceived a United States warship with Albert Mix in second command. This reminded them that Richard Perry was also in the navy.

Arriving in Paris they chanced to meet two old acquaintances, Thelma Roache and Laura Root, who were visiting Europe. Here also at Paris, Mildred Wood was studying the French language, and Helen Stocking was working in a world famous fashion emporium.

Passing over Russia the friends noticed many engineering feats constructed by a world famous engineer, John Rich.

The next stop on the trip was China. Here Dorothea Bradford and Sara Cardone were engaging in missionary work.

Successfully crossing the Pacific they saw again the United States where at Seattle a graceful landing was made. At a school here Alice Bates and Barbara Gill were gym instructors. Stopping in Hollywood the friends met the world famous Posson sisters, Flora and Margaret, and Ethel Pafk, all of whom were screen stars.

Also living in California were the happily married girl classmates, Helen Schilling, Charlotte Lowenthall and Anna Marino. At a summer resort were Gertrude Ellis and Aleta Kendall, both scenario writers.

On the last hop for home the two friends passed over Chicago where Grace Hassall and Helen Groff lived as editors of a fashion magazine.

The trip was finished. The classmates in the plane parted to go about their various professions.

Last Will and Testament of Class of 1932

To Whom It May or May Not Concern:

WE, the Senior Class of Medina High School, in the year 1932, A. D., being of sound mind and sound body (all evidence to the contrary, notwithstanding) have been forced to leave all and sundry of our possessions, whether material or immaterial. Therefore, we hereby leave and bequeath.

ARTICLE I—To the Class of '33

- (1) Privilege of occupying rear seats in study hall.
- (2) Ability to escape detection when whispering.
- (3) Our great dignity and superior example with which to awe Sophomores and Freshmen.

- (4) The right to sign their own report cards and write their own excuses. (To be used with care.)
- (5) Our exceptional ability and brilliance in History C.
- (6) One perfectly good set of English IV marks.
- (7) All unclaimed pieces of chewing material adhering to underside of seats in Room 306.
- (8) The love and esteem of the faculty.
- (9) The pleasure of reading "Hamlet."
- (10) Our diligence and unquenched thirst for knowledge.
- (11) The balance in the class treasury on the condition it turns out to be a deficit; also, one bank book for any closed bank.
- (12) A copy of this Will from which to pattern others.

ARTICLE II—To the Class of '34

Note:—Because of the great difference in mentality between their class and ours, we feel that we have nothing of value which we can bequeath to them. However, we hope that they will avail themselves of the educational resources of M. H. S. and will strive to uphold our standard of perfection.

- (1) The right to play ping-pong and "drop-the-handkerchief" in gym. (In order that they may recover from the effects of such strenuous exercise they may sleep one (1) period a day.)
- (2) When, and if, they become Juniors the right to "go steady."

ARTICLE III—Bequests to the Faculty

- (1) To Mr. Brown, a faculty better trained by association with us. The ingenious teaching devices which they (in desperation) have invented to get us through will surely prove of great value to the school.
- (2) To Miss Ferguson, the right to make longer English assignments.
- (3) To Mr. Martin, a long paddle for use in patrolling the halls.
- (4) To Miss Ames, the play, "Trade Your Watch" or "Through Darkest M. H. S.," which we wrote.
- (5) To the faculty, one sigh of relief at our departure.

ARTICLE IV—Special Bequests

- (1) Ethel Pafk, her customary silence to Marion Smith.
- (2) Florence Chamberlin, her "stand in" with the teachers to Gordon Howe.
- (3) Glenn Bloomingdale, a sample of his handwriting to anyone able to read it.
- (4) Leland Monagle, his taste for color to Kenneth Allen.
- (5) Senior Girls, their various "lines" of talk to Junior girls.
- (6) Senior Boys, patience to stand those "lines" to Junior boys.
- (7) Doug. Ryan, his alarm clock to Bill Mackey.

- (8) David White, his ability as a "crooner" to Bob Nagle.
- (9) Seniors in Cicero class, their "ponies" to Miss Rugg, trusting that she will distribute them to future Cicero classes.
- (10) Thelma Roache, her exceptional ability in Math. to Leonard Hales.
- (11) Barbara Gill, her athletic ability to Helen Montgomery.
- (12) Raymond Ingram, his Chevrolet to anyone having the necessary patience.

- (17) Florence Boyle, her red hair to Glenn Beach.
- (18) Smith Munson, his way with the women to Tom Sheldon.
- (19) Eddie Feller, his ability to throw missiles in study hall to Dyke Kilner.
- (20) Clare Stillinger, his back-woods drawl to Paul Carson.
- (21) Laura Root, what is left of her "squad car" to Room 306.
- (22) Stan. Rook, his dramatic ability to his brother Francis.
- (23) Ivy Shepard, her continuous chatter to Marie Reynolds.

- (32) Stanley Hill, his ambition (all of it) to "Red" McElwee.
- (33) Lilah Bolton, her book "How to Grow Up" to Arlene Pask.
- (34) Sara Cardone, her "German" accent to Margaret Smith.
- (35) Margaret Bookey, all her French III books to anybody willing to pay enough for them.
- (36) Carlton Waters, one pair of shoe laces to anybody with the shoes.
- (37) Dorothy White, all her "True Story" magazines to Lorraine Clapp.
- (38) Edna Boyle, her eyelashes to get rid of them.
- (39) Elsie Wright, her shorthand to anyone whose hands are too long.
- (40) Gordon McPherson, the right to use the car for one year to the "guy" who'll buy the gas.

- (41) Helen Schilling, her copy of teachers' initials for slips to Helen Flattery.
- (42) The makers of this Will, the right to write next year's Will to anybody foolish enough to do it.

Lastly: We hereby appoint Miss E. M. Ferguson as sole executrix of this, our last Will or Wilt, hereby revoking all former wills and bills made by us. In witness whereof, we have hereunto subscribed our names on this 18th day of March, in the year Nineteen Hundred and Thirty-two.

THE SENIOR CLASS OF 1932

By: Glenn Bloomingdale
and
David White

We, whose handles are hereunto affixed, do certify that on the 18th day of March, 1932, the testators above named, subscribed their names to the instrument in our presence and hearing, declared the same to be their last Will and Testament, and requested us and each of us, to sign our names thereto as witnesses to the execution thereof, which we hereby do in the presence of the testators, and of each other, on the day of the date of the said Will and write opposite our names our respective places of residence.

Herbert C. Hoover, Washington, D. C.

Franklin D. Roosevelt, Albany, N. Y.

Sealed and Signed this eighteenth day of March, nineteen hundred and thirty-two, A. D., and entered on this day into the records of Orleans County at the office of the County Clerk (who charged us two dollars and fifty cents).

Life

Comes the oft repeated question: What is life?
And, Oh Seer, pray tell us can you, why such strife?
But the Learned One can not give answer why,
For he knows that we must be content to try
To discover for ourselves life's straight highway,
Whereon we must travel with the rest today;
And for us the way that leads to happiness
Is the one on which we always strive and press,
'Till, at last, the goal we've sought so long is gained,
And to us is life a venture to the end.

Gayly Pleasure calls us; let us heed her voice,
Follow at her bidding without thought or choice.

THE Girl Reserve Club was organized through the cooperation of the school and community board. Its purpose is "to help the girls to find and give the best." This is expressed very clearly in the Girl Reserve code:

"As a Girl Reserve I will try to be

Gracious in manner
Impartial in judgment
Ready for service
Loyal to friends
Reaching toward the best
Earnest in purpose

Seeing the beautiful
Eager for knowledge
Reverent to God
Victorious over self
Ever dependable
Sincere at all times."

Alumni Notes (Class of 1931)

MINE is not the weird incantation of a crystal gazer; mine is a tale of facts—pure, simple facts, which tend to arouse my distrust in the supernatural. But to get on with the story—

Lillian Spiller, the foreign correspondent-to-be, is taking a post graduate course at Medina High School while waiting for "Mlle. Acquere" (now attending the Kathryn Gibbs School in Boston) to open up her Fifth Avenue Shop. Pauline Hise, the well-known "divorcee," is settling down (?) at Brockport Normal for the life of a teacher. Verna Garrett has many years ahead of her before she obtains the office of Secretary of Labor and is still in Medina. Winthrop Curvin likewise gave up his office of Secretary of Commerce and decided upon Cornell. Ruth Gill is still broadcasting, but this time for snow from Sweet Briar, Virginia.

Francis O'Donnell, Jr., generously abandoned his archaeological expedition into the desert in order to aid Jack Munson, also a post graduate, in making things lively in 300. Arthur Foreman, Jack Bundock, Bernard Chick, and Melvin Pritchard strongly disagreed on the choice of secretaries for the General Motors' Board of Directors, thus forcing Helen Balcerzak and Dorothy Sechowski to remain at home. Consequently, Arthur Foreman is living up to his reputation in 300, Jack Bundock is at Bryant and Stratton, Bernard Chick is a post graduate, and Melvin Pritchard remains at home.

Buffalo is the home of more than one of our number. Mary Kerr, although not in the robe of Supreme Court Judge, still commands attention in the Buffalo State College. Norma Kleinsmith and Edna Ebeling are trodding the paths of learning along with Mary, and Julia Reil is at the Albany State Teachers' College. Donald Labigan is still as "Frenchy" as ever at Hobart College. Howard Caldwell is attending Oswego State Normal.

Walter Sechowski gave up his position as coach at Notre Dame and decided to remain at home with Charles Montgomery, who is building himself up to play with the New York Giants next season. Kenneth Kleinsmith and Arthur Gilbert returned home after closing their automobile agency in New York. Cecil Hamann is delving into the mysteries of space at his home. Howard Caufield and Tom Cromwell are seen frequently at home as is Vernon Rich. Edward Zyne is at Mechanics' Institute.

But what of our musically-minded fellows? "Fat" Waters is still in town taking a Post Graduate Course and playing in the neighboring towns and cities. Harry Christy, famous banjoist, could not endure the sorrow of parting from his bosom friend, "Fat," and is still at Medina High School. The noted piano twins, "Fred" Alderson and "Jud" Gilbert, have parted, each to make a name for himself, "Fred" at the Ohio Northern and "Jud" at University of Minnesota. "Mlle." Bernadine Parker is attracting attention (?) at Fredonia State Normal, while Carl Schultz is still at home. Harold Banister is attending Brockport Normal, contrary to all expectations and prophecies of the Hindu. Thelma Gould decided to retire from her role as cello soloist and is back with her friends, Marjorie Hill and Irmgard Hellwig, at M. H. S. Dorothy Gottovi and Robert Conley are also here.

We find several of our fellow alumni working in town, namely, Kathryn Gaze, Helen Strates, Doris Law, Mary Mastromonaco. Lillian Boyle, Marian Gotts, Dorothy Hales, Marie Robinson, Bernice Strabe, Alfrieda Quintern and Hildreth Walker are at home. Herbert Pintler is attending Antioch College in Ohio.

Just facts, friends, just facts, but strong enough facts to make me think that the Hindu's prophecies were made of yard wide imagination.

—Verna Garrett

She must surely show us what we seek, we cried,
Of tripping, dancing, laughing joy personified.
Speeding brightly with her, light as thistle-down
Flinging care to all the world; our life is found!
But—our sprightly leader vanished from our sight
Like a broken bubble when a shadow light
Chanc'd to fall upon her as she led our way;
Madly searching brought us only dull dismay
For a throb of pain and fear of things unknown
Frightened Pleasure and she left us all alone.

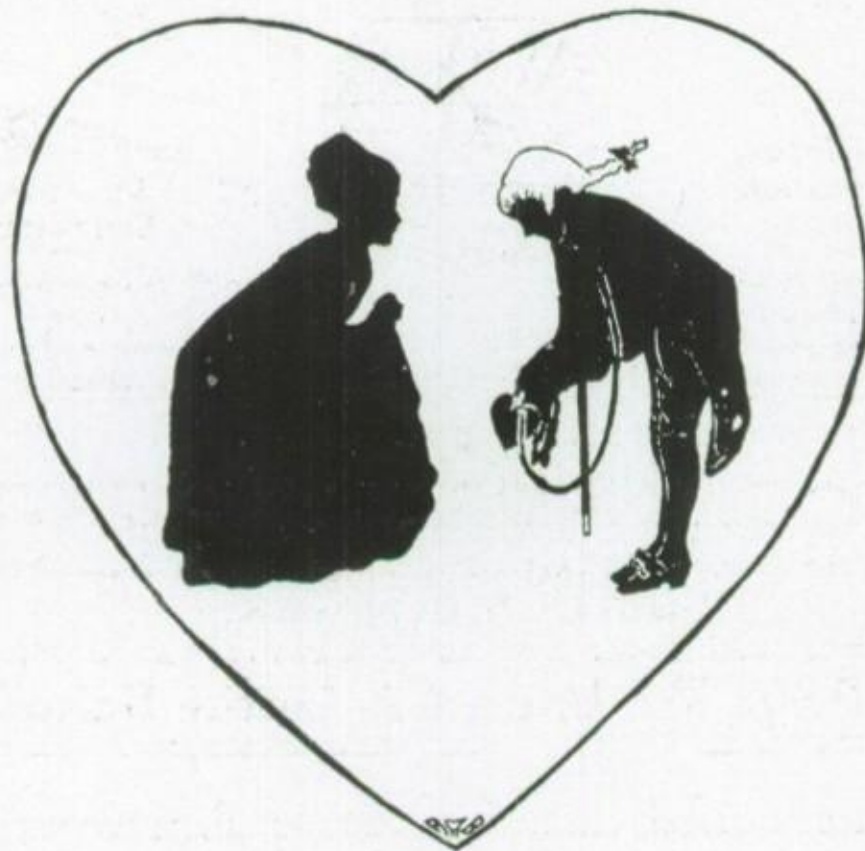

Tired completely, wearied, conquer'd, we the chase
Give up, hoping that in some far-distant place
Pleasure will again appear. So gath'ring up
Blindly fragments of our early, youthful hope,
We then turn to Toil for solace, help and strength.
But too soon we learn that Toil can not
Ease the pain of sorrow not to be forgot

Merely by the wish of aching souls. Unless
Toil can help us what will guide us in distress?

Pleasure fails us, Toil deserts us, 'till we know
No place that will give contentment, and we grow
Restless and discouraged, but some quiet hour
As we are there alone a tiny, lovely flower
Seems to whisper softly to our weary heart
That life is not uncertain; from the start
What may happen to us serves but a test,
If we make each circumstance give us its best,
We go on to higher, broader reaches, 'till
We at last find peace and satisfaction. Still
We discover deep within, that in our stress
We, indeed, have found our road to happiness.
